

Academic Visit by Bishop Heber College Students with Seminar on ‘Emerging Horizons: Ecology, War, Digital Age Narratives and Human Vulnerability’

Date: 12/12/2025

Venue: Seminar Hall

An Academic Visit was organized for 30 M.A. students and 2 faculty members from Bishop Heber College as part of their curricular and experiential learning activities. The visit aimed to enhance academic exposure, interdisciplinary understanding, and cultural awareness.

As part of the visit, the students attended a seminar titled “Emerging Horizons: Ecology, War, Digital Age Narratives, and Human Vulnerability”, delivered by Dr. A. Muthu Meena Losini, Assistant Professor of English. The seminar addressed contemporary literary and cultural concerns by examining ecological crises, war narratives, digital-age transformations, and representations of human vulnerability.

During the session, the speaker offered insightful perspectives on how modern literature responds to global challenges such as environmental degradation, psychological impacts of war, technological advancement, and human resilience. The seminar encouraged critical thinking and interdisciplinary engagement, helping students connect literary studies with current social and global realities. The interaction session further enabled students to clarify concepts and actively participate in academic discussion.

The academic visit proved to be highly beneficial, combining scholarly learning with cultural and historical exposure. It contributed significantly to the students’ academic development and broadened their intellectual and social perspectives. The visit concluded successfully with positive feedback from both students and faculty members.
